This certification does not require anyone to have a formal training from any Cisco-related company. For those who are interested, they must only have a high understanding level when it comes to end-to-end networking and all the other complications that are related to it. Hands-on training would be very much helpful for those who are interested to claim this kind of certification.

Range of Salaries

Yes, it is true that most people who are Cisco Certified get higher salaries compared to those people who do not have one. Imagine those professionals who are getting more than $100,000 just because of the combination of their skills and the CCIE certification. That surely is a big thing!

Why do they have higher salaries? Simple. Cisco certification is so tough and there was never an incident that proved that they have faked the certification. They say that one must really know their craft in order to attain the certification. Cisco Certified is considered so strong in a consistent way because they make sure that Cisco requires individuals to always keep up with what certification they have. You cannot have it forever. This only means that after a few years, you are required to become updated with your skills in order to renew your certification. When applying for a job, the employer knows immediately that you are qualified for the IT work because you are certified by Cisco.

Whatever you think about it, the certification is an excellent investment for your dream career. It will help you generate more money for your future whether for your job or for your own business.

You might think that getting a certification from Cisco could you a job in the future. It does not. You have to make sure that you look for an appropriate job that would be related to your experiences and training in order to become successful in your chosen career.
